

Features • Issue number 13 • Dec 2004/Jan 20

World Bank faces down carbon critics

News that the World Bank is to add more funds to its carbon finance business served to stoke growing criticism that it risks 'crowding out' the private sector. Mark Nicholls hears the case for the defense.

Posted 13/01/2005

.....
Marco Monroy, president of MGM International, a leading South American consultancy specialising in the Clean Development Mechanism (CDM), was prepared to make his criticisms known - although he suggests that maybe the problem is with institutional buyers (governments and other MFIs) as much as with the Bank.

Lead Stories • Issue number 12 • November 2004

Frustration on all sides as CDM Executive Board faces Q&A session

Posted 20/12/2004

.....
Marco Monroy, president of MGM International, a major developer of CDM projects, expressed many project developers' frustration with the slow process in getting projects approved. He said he was also worried about approved methodologies being changed and possibly becoming unusable, in reference to the Board's decision to alter the AM0001 HFC23 destruction methodology. "I don't think you realize the difficulties you impose," he added.

Lead Stories • Issue number 12 • November 2004

Market unhappy at CDM Board decision on HFC23

Posted 7/12/2004

.....Marco Monroy, president of MGM International, which has two CDM methodologies approved by the Executive Board, said it is possible that N20 could be affected. "We were not expecting this scrutiny of HFCs and so who knows what might happen to N20," he added.

Lead Stories • Issue number 10 • September 2004

HFC methodology "put on hold" by Executive Board

Posted 20/09/2004

.....The approved methodologies involve the use of industrial cogeneration plants, submitted by MGM International, and a process for capturing methane and using it for power generation, developed by Mitsubishi Securities.

Features • Issue number 2 • January 2004

Getting ready for market

MARCO MONROY and GAUTAM DUTT tackle the many stages in realising a successful CDM project

Posted 28/01/2004

Marco Monroy is the president and Gautam Dutt is technology manager of MGM International, a Latin America-based company based to develop CDM projects E-mail: marcogmonroy@mgminter.com and gdutt@mgminter.com